The Vicar.—Mr. and Mrs. Bligh who had to come to England on business for a few days in the middle of May, are now back in Northern Italy. They intend (D.V.) to return to the Vicarage early in August. The Bee Show, which will form part of the Horticultural Society's Exhibition at the Vicarage, on the 18th July, will be something more than the ordinary manipulations to which we have been accustomed of late years. The Bee tent will be pitched quite apart from the Flower Show, so that there will be no risk of the Bees being made wild, as occured once before. There will be several candidates examined for Experts' certificates by an Examiner appointed by the British Bee-keepers' Association, and their manipulations alone will be very instructive to all desirous of keeping Bees.

The Middlesex Bee-keepers' Association offer a silver and a bronze medal for competition, and a local committee have arranged a schedule of prizes, which, it is hoped, will draw together a good exhibition of hives and other appliances. The prize fund still requires a few pounds to enable the exhibition to be made entirely free to all who pay for admission to the flower show. Major Fair, 10, Anlaby Road, Teddington, or Mr. James Mason, Broad Lane, Hampton, will be happy to receive contributions. The Middlesex Bee-keepers' Association is now a very thorough organisation, with a net-work of local committees and secretaries all over the County. It endeavours to instruct cottagers' and others in the best methods of raising honey, the great bulk of which evaporates for want of Bees to collect it. Some people give Bees a bad character for spoiling their plums, but this is a mistake, as they are not fitted by nature with any appliance for cutting the skins. If anyone is foolish enough to leave over-ripe plums on his trees, and a wasp or bird taps them, it is quite possible, that Bees being extremely economical insects, could not pass a lot of sweets running to waste without trying to save some, but they never start the mischief. There is only one objection to Bee-keeping, but that is a very pointed one; it may, however, easily be guarded against by veil, gloves, &c. Beginners should not be taken in by a few old hands they see at shows, who pretend they rather like being stung, but before commencing operations, should take care to render themselves invulnerable.

Our Schools.—We publish this month, last year's list of subscriptions, which amounted to $\pounds74$ 18s. 6d. against $\pounds98$ 14s. 9d. in 1884. The result of the gradual falling off was a deficit of $\pounds46$ on last year's account, which has to be made up this year. In addition to this deficit, we have to face an increased expenditure of about $\pounds40$ a year to meet the Government requirements. None of this is optional, we are obliged by Act of Parliament to provide the money somehow. The only thing optional is the method of raising it—we may have a School Board and raise it by taxes, or continue the present system of voluntary contribution. The present system is much the cheaper, but the full amount must be raised. Eventually the portion now raised for the boys' school by subscriptions, should come out of the Hampton School Endowments, like that of Hampton and Hampton Wick Schools.

There is great difficulty in getting volunteer collectors, owing to the shabby treatment they receive from some of those they call on. By their efforts in collecting, they save each ratepayer a tax of about 8d. in the \pounds , and we trust, therefore, that the collectors will be received with kindness and consideration, and treated as people deserve, who carry out a disagreeable duty for duty's sake. It should also be mentioned that owing to the decrease in the Church offertories, the general fund has not as yet yielded anything for the Schools. A great and generous effort is now needed, and we trust the people of Hampton Hill who generally hang well together, will not be found wanting.
